Two enzymatic methods for the assay of urinary digoxin (d-ex) were compared with the method of Gülzau on 226 random urine samples. The methods used are: 1. an assay of d-ex based on fluorescence derivatization using derivatives of 7-thio-digoxin (TDD) and the method of d-ex based on analysis of free digoxin in urine (AD). The results of the two assays were calculated according to a specific excretion ratio (F:E). The two methods show a good correlation with each other ($r = 0.896$; p less than 0.001). The mean percent error ($d\text{-ex} = E \times F / E$) is -3.5% (TDD) and $+2.4\%$ (AD). The 95% confidence interval for individual measurements is $\pm 7.7\%$ (TDD) and $\pm 6.4\%$ (AD). In patients with renal insufficiency the mean percent error is significantly more favourable for TDD than for AD. A second point of interest is the fact that the between-day coefficient of variation in our laboratory is significantly lower for TDD (-21.0%) than for AD (-27.8%).Q: Iphone mapping annotations from a plist I am new to Iphone development. I am building a mapping application which fetches data from a web service, displays it in a table, and then it takes user's click on a certain annotation on the map and sends it to the web service to get modified data. Now I am not sure how to proceed with the following scenarios: How should I integrate the plist file in this process? Should I create another view in the application which takes the user input and then show him the plist of the images? Will the web service be able to understand the location and orientation of the image when there is no url present? If yes, then how do I make sure that the updated data is sent to the web service? (In fact the web service returns the orientation of the image
