What's New in the Crazy Browser?

Crazy Browser is a simple browser utility that has gained a considerable fan base since it was first launched. Its main component is a small icon set, alongside a simple, clean layout that feels familiar at first glance. Getting started: Crazy Browser is a standalone executable with no installation necessary. To run the tool, you will need to create a shortcut to it from the Start menu, or launch it directly using “%Program Files%\Crazy Browser”. It's the ideal tool for viewing websites. Simply paste a web address into the input box, and the utility will automatically open it up in the right tab. The address can be added from anywhere, so this tiny and lightweight utility can be utilized without hassle. Obviously, you can directly click on the address text box to open an address in your default browser. But Crazy Browser also supports multiple tabs. Simply click the icon with three dots, and you can open as many sites as you wish at once. The compact icons are visually pleasing. The layout is slightly unique in that it has plain icons in the first tab, and has larger, colorful ones in the last. However, it may not suit everyone, as its standard gray theme may not be to everyone's taste. Crazy Browser is very simple to use. The interface is entirely text-based, so even if you've never used a terminal before, you will be able to grasp it in no time. Help file: While the app is very simple and lightweight, when you want to read the description of its main functions, you will still need a little help. The tool's unofficial homepage offers a good idea. It also features a built-in help file. The menu is straightforward, and the entire app is simple to understand and use. Screenshots: Some samples are included. The tab interface is shown in the image below. Tabs can be opened for multiple sites at once, from anywhere. The bottom tab contains the address bar itself, which you can use to quickly change the page in order to view the desired tab. This is the download page itself, which is the entire browser. Another view of the Main window. There are small button icons in the first row, which can be used to open an address in any open browser. The back and forward buttons open a new tab. The magnifying glass icon can be used to search for the desired page.
